THERE'S STILL TIME TO SAVE THE KOALA IN SEPTEMBER

September is Save the Koala Month; the annual fundraising and awareness campaign from the Australian Koala Foundation.

Although Save the Koala Month is sadly reaching its final weeks, the pinnacle of the campaign is on Save the Koala Day, which falls on Friday, September 26th.

The AKF is urging everyone who has been thinking of helping out but hasn't yet, to do so on this day.

Whether you're thinking of holding a fundraiser, selling some products or simply donating, Save the Koala Day is the perfect time to do so.

'It's a time for Australians to go above and beyond to help koalas, a true Australian icon', said Deborah Tabart OAM, CEO of the AKF.

'The future of koalas is serious business, but September is a time where we can have fun and appreciate how cute and precious they really are'.

So far during Save the Koala Month there has been wonderful support from around Australia and the world with one common theme: loving and protecting koalas.

'When the AKF started, our Founder, Mr Barry Scott said that he wanted people all over the world to care and share for the Koala, and we can see this happening.' Tabart said.

A special addition to Save the Koala Month this year are cute Koala Finger Puppets. At $2.00 each they are a simple way to show your support.

Lots have already been sold, but there are plenty left ready to be sent off to good homes.

The AKF is also opening their new shop on Save the Koala Day, located at 40 Charlotte Street, Brisbane.

The highly popular shop in ANZAC Square has closed down recently, and its relocation is highly anticipated.

All funds raised will go to the AKF, whose sole mission is working towards a Koala Protection Act.

Loss of habitat is the wild Koalas biggest problem, and this Act will ensure it is completely protected.
